

OHIO MOB FIRED ON.

A Band of Lynchers Tries to Get a Convicted Negro.

The Sheriff Calls on the Militia to Help Him.

THREE MEN KILLED.

Troops Are Compelled to Shoot at the Mob.

WASHINGTON COURT HOUSE, Ohio, Oct. 18.—William Dolby, colored, who one week ago assaulted Mrs. Mary C. Boyd, aged 55, at Parrott's station, near here, and was captured at Delaware, Ohio, was brought into court at 4 o'clock yesterday afternoon. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to twenty years in the penitentiary. An angry mob gathered about the jail after Dolby had been identified by his victim, and Sheriff Cook called to his assistance the local militia company. This action increased the fury against Dolby and Governor McKinley was appealed to for additional assistance and troops from Columbus were sent here, Colonel Colt in command. The mob surrounded the jail and court house and attempted to take Dolby from the officers when removed from jail to the court for trial but were kept at bay by the free use of bayonets and clubbed gun.

When brought to the court house Dolby broke down. While bringing him from the jail the mob charged and almost succeeded in getting him. Henry Kirk, the brother-in-law of Mrs. Boyd, was knocked down the steps and badly bruised. Another man was bayoneted through the finger, while a bayonet was thrust through the clothes of another.

Deputies with revolvers drawn guarded their prisoner in the court room. Dolby cried like a baby and kept looking around for help. Soldiers marched in to keep the crowd quiet. After the sentence the prisoner was taken to the grand jury room. A mob gathered about the court house and it was impossible to get the prisoner through to take him to the train.

The officers were powerless to get Dolby from the court house to the jail to the train and Sheriff Cook called the governor to send more troops.

The mob grew rapidly in numbers and desperation. Colonel Colt made a speech, asking the crowd to disperse, but it was received with jeers. The prisoner was prostrate from fear, and lay crying and moaning all the time.

The mob kept Dolby and his guards prisoners in the court house until 6 p. m., and then made an attack. The militia repelled them without firing at first, but at 6:45 p. m. the south door was forced open. This door opens upon the street which was filled with men, women and children. The detachment of the guards finally fired on the attacking party. None of the latter were hurt, but a dozen or more persons in the street were struck, two killed outright and four more were fatally wounded, one having since died. The killed are: Smith Welsh, aged 16, and Jesse Judy.

Mack Johnson of Williamsburg died in an hour.

William Sams, shot through the bowels; fatally.

George Keating, aged 12; through both legs and groin; will die.

F. L. Nitterhouse was shot through both ankles. A full list of the wounded cannot be had, as they were taken away promptly, but the following are known:

John Theodore Ammerman, Dial Parrott, John McCune, John Korn, Ernest Ellis, Frank Smith.

The people are frenzied and threaten to dynamite the court house. Additional troops have been ordered from Cincinnati, Columbus, Chillicothe and other points.

GUNS AT THE POLLS.

Riot Breaks Out at St. Louis Republican Primaries.

Several Negroes Are Knocked Down and Beaten.

A. P. A. OCCASIONED IT.

A Boasting Man With a Shotgun Begins the Trouble.

ST. LOUIS, Mo., Oct. 18.—A riot broke out yesterday afternoon at one of the polling places in the Seventeenth ward where Republican primaries were being held for the selection of delegates to the Republican city and the Twelfth district congressional convention. Knives and pistols were drawn and for a time it looked as if there might be blood shed, but nobody received more than bruises. Fifty or more police officers appeared on the scene and quelled the riot, arresting Tom Malone, one of the leaders of the gang which caused the trouble and nine or ten other men. Several other leaders escaped during the confusion.

It seems that the riot commenced when A. H. Luster drove up to the polling place with a shotgun and announced himself an A. P. A., and said he was afraid of nobody. Another version is that he damned the A. P. A., and said he was ready to fight any member of that organization. His remarks, whatever they were, incensed the crowd and a rush was made for him. He drove off and escaped but the trouble continued when the men, who were later arrested, attacked a number of negroes who had already voted or who were waiting to do so, for the reason, it is said, that they were supporting A. P. A. candidates.

A crowd of several hundred people gathered around the negroes who were knocked down and beaten and the single policeman present, finding that he could not control the mob, telephoned for additional officers who quelled the riot. Luster was arrested and taken to police headquarters. He said that he was talking to a friend at the polls in his buggy, while on his way to go hunting. This he said, accounted for the presence of his gun.

Luster was arrested and taken to police headquarters. He said that he was talking to a friend at the polls in his buggy, while on his way to go hunting. This he said, accounted for the presence of his gun.

Survivors of Indian Wars.

WASHINGTON, Oct. 18.—Assistant Secretary Reynolds of the interior department has decided that section 4718 of the revised statutes relative to the payment of accrued pensions, is applicable to pensioners under the act of July 27, 1892, granting pensions to the survivors of certain Indian wars. It is also held that the section authorizes the widow of the deceased soldier to prosecute his pending claim under that act and receive the accrued pension to the date of the soldier's death. This action reverses the decision of the commissioner of pensions, made in May, 1893.

Wanted in Many Sections.

THURSTON AND BRYAN.

Opening of the Joint Political Debate at Lincoln, Neb.

LINCOLN, Neb., Oct. 18.—The first of the joint debates on political issues between Honorable W. J. Bryan and Honorable John M. Thurston occurred here yesterday afternoon. It is estimated 7,000 people were in Agricultural hall during the speaking. The whole state was represented, and many from other states were present. The fact both speakers were present. Candidates for the United States senate added to the interest of the occasion. The reception given to the principal figures of the afternoon was hearty and enthusiastic. C. J. Smith of Omaha, and John P. Maul of Lincoln, took turns in presiding. As Mr. Bryan was to open the debate, Mr. Smith made the introductory statement. He stated the condition of the debate, and invoked respectful attention to both speakers. Then he introduced Congressman Bryan, who was greeted with cheers. The terms of the debate confined the speakers on no particular topic. Bryan touched chiefly on silver, income tax and the Pacific railroad indebtedness. The income tax was fair, and he was satisfied the future would vindicate his judgment. As to the Pacific railroads, if he was elected to the senate he proposed to do the best to have the government mortgage foreclosed. It was on the silver issue that he was most eloquent. He was sure the white metal would be victorious eventually. He pointed to the gains it had made recently in all parts of the country as vindication of his position. Mr. Bryan was cheered vociferously at the conclusion of his remarks.

Mr. Thurston received a great ovation. He is a graceful speaker and in a measure has an advantage of his able opponent. His speech was more of a general nature than that of Bryan. He confessed to be at a disadvantage in the estimation of some in discussing the Pacific railroads since he was the attorney of the leading company. Still he was confident it was not to the advantage of the people of the whole country to have the government to foreclose its second mortgage since it may then pay the enormous first mortgage indebtedness. Replying to Mr. Bryan's income tax views he was brief and deprecated the measure, believing it could not endure. On silver the speaker became brilliant. After declaring to the surprise of some that he favored the free coinage of the American production, he pictured the enormous loads of foreign metal that would be dumped into this country in the event of free coinage and in closing declared the metal was perfectly preposterous. In Mr. Bryan's closing reply he became personal and denounced Thurston for his political acts of the past. They speak at Omaha to-night.

COSMOPOLITE DONAN.

He Hailed From South Dakota and "Still Keeps on Haunting."

NEW YORK, Sept. 27.—"I hail from Devil's Lake, S. D., and it's a good place to hail from so long as one keeps on haunting. I should not think of going back there to live. I was outlawed from two states soon after the close of the war, and I have outlived myself from Dakota. In truth, I can't answer your question as to my residence, for I am a cosmopolite. I am somewhat like that young lady in the old story who, being asked what was her native place, replied: 'I never had any. My father was an itinerant Methodist preacher.' I was born in Hinds county, Miss., but my present residence you will find in the directions on those letters."

The speaker was Colonel Peter Donan, commonly called Pat Donan, and it was in his room at the hotel. His table was well covered with letters addressed "Colonel P. Donan, United States," "Colonel Patrick Donan, New York," and so on.

Colonel Donan is tall, rather spare and nervous in manner and appearance, with very mild blue eyes, light hair, beginning to show gray, and a full beard, which is turning from light brown to a lighter shade. From crown to heel he is the typical thin, wiry southern blond.

"This erratic life, of which much is said," he remarked, "resulted from series of unforeseen events—in fact, was kicked into it. I was down on knees playing marbles in Paris, M. just like any other big boy, on the 7th of July, 1861, and on the 8th I was der fire in what they then called a battle. Indeed they had pictures of it the illustrated papers and told of 'showers of shot.' What nonsense! That destroyed all my faith in war history, and I have never had any since. Ninety-nine per cent of it is a lie. That was the merest skirmish, but we had a fine Federal regiment captured and only lost it through the folly of Tom Harris. Our next affair amounted to something, though, for it was the making of General Grant."

"Ah, how was that?"

"It was at Hickman's Mill, on Salt river, in Monroe county. We were under General Martin E. Greene—Missouri state troops, you know. Grant was very doubtful of his raw troops and knew if he was defeated he was lost, for there was much talk about his habits. So he advanced with great caution. There was a little very careful shooting, and that night General Greene slipped away and joined Price. So Grant got his start and afterward ac-knowledgeed that he there learned the important lesson that the other fellow was likely to be ashy of him as he was of the other fellow. The papers told of a 'terrible charge' and 'the ground strewn with dead and wounded,' but there was no such thing. Lord, how the papers did lie in those days!

"It was that fall, in the retreat from Missouri, that I made my first bluff. I wrote to headquarters that I was not made for a private soldier and would not be one; that I was going to get out of this armed mob and go to Virginia, where they had some real war, and especially I was going to get somewhere where everybody would not look on me as a boy and call me Pete. There was no discipline, and every fellow came and went at will and begged, bought or stole his provisions, but I did want to leave in some sort of style. I was sure I could soon sunburn and roughen up to pass for 21, though I was not quite 17. I went to north Missouri, rode right through Fremont's army and eastward into West Virginia, slipped through to the Confederates and got a commission. When I was 18, I reckon I was the youngest colonel in either army."

These reminiscences led the colonel into a lengthy digression on the war as seen from the southern side, the blunders of reconstruction and the meanness of some western politicians, and this last evidently roused unpleasant memories for his eye lighted with an unusual fire and his language was singularly forcible as he gave his opinion of the Dakota senators from first to last. "We are only fairly into this experiment, and if we admit the riffraff of the world we shall have to give up a republic."

As a newspaper writer Colonel Donan has been compared to a mountain torrent, a tropical hurricane, a rapid rushing river and a spouting well. Opie Read spoke of him as a "freak of letters who crowds literary facts close upon the heels of capering grotesques, a poet without perceptible passion and a literary photographer without the scent of chemicals." Before attaining his majority he was employed by Archbishop Hughes as a writer for Catholic papers, and he has since written for papers of every shade of politics, but always in his own torrid style. In short, Colonel Donan is just what the tumultuous times of war and reconstruction would naturally make of an ardent, impulsive southern boy who had received a complete classical education at the age of 16 and was burning to emulate the heroes of antiquity.
